Obscuring every western star.

Thou solemn month! I hear thy voice,

I tells my soul of other days,
When but to live was to rejoice,
When but to live was to rejoice,
When earth was levely to my gaze!
Oh, visions bright—oh, blessed hours,
Where are their living raptures now?
I ask my spirit's westied powers—
I ask my pale and fevered brow!

I look to Nature, and behold
My life's dim emblems rustling round,
In hues of crimson and of gold—
The year's dead honors on the ground:
And sighing with the winds, I feel,
While their low pinions murmur by,
How much their sweeping tones reveal
Of life and human destiny.

How like these transports of the breast
When life is fresh and joy is new;
Soft as the haleyon's downy nest,
And transient all as they are true!
They stir the leaves in that bright wreath,
Which hope about her forchead twines,
Till Grief's hot sighs around it breaths,
Then Pleasure's lip its smile resigns.

What gloom about our way they fling!
Like clouds in Autumn's gusty air,
The burial-pageant of the Spring.
The dreams that each successive year
Seemed bathed in bues of brighter pride,

A murdenes attack was made on the British Legation in Jeddo on the night of the 5th of July, by a band of some fifty Japanese bandits, with the intent of killing the British Minister, Mr. Alcock, and making a cican aweep by murdering every monbac attached to the Legation. Fortunately no one attached to the Legation was killed and no one seriously hurt except Mr. Oli phant, who would loose an arm in conse quence of severe cuts on the wrist and hand. The residence of the British Minister and members of the Legation is situated near the center of the city, and how the bandits passed the guards and the gates is unknown.

An account says: They were first discovered by a young Solemn, yet beautiful ta view,
Mouth of my heart! thou dawnest here,
With sad and faded leaves to strew
The Summer's melancholy bier.
The meaning of thy winds I hear,
As the red sunset dies afar,
And bars of purple clouds appear,
Observing avery western star. man, one of the student interpeters attached to the Legation, who was going his usual round at twelve o'clock, with his dark lantern to see that all was right. He saw them trying to force their way into the house, when he went to the room of Mr. Alcock and gave the alarm; this was about twelve o'clock at night. Mr. Alcock went into the ball, which is some 150 feet long, with low ceilings, where he found the lights partly out and a general fight going on among the desperadoes who had broken in and the guard, who heard the noise and came rush ing in to protect their master. Messrs. Oliphant and Morrison were both in the half and had fired several pistol shots; the first shot struck a man on the left side and dropped down. The man had on armor. When the guard came in and the fight became general, Morrison and Oliphant very wisely backed out, and let the Japanese When Spring's delight some moments shone,

They both had Colt's revolvers; but in a patially dark room, among some fifteen or twenty jackoninines using their short swords right and left, pistols were of little use. It was when Mr. Oliphant was in the act of defending himself, by throwing up his arm to defend his head, that he received the cut on the wrist of his right arm.

There were five of the bandits killed, some half dozen wounded, besides three that committed haei-kari, and one taken prisoner, but who cannot be made to give the names of any of his associates, or make any disclosures that would lead to detection.

The guard behaved with great bravery, and were highly complimented by Mr. Alcock the next day. One of the guard was killed and several cut and wounded.

It is asserted that the Japanese have sworn to have the life of Mr. Alcock in revenge for his sacrilegious attempt lately to visit the city of Miake, the residence of the Spiritual Emperor, and for profaning the sacred heights of Fusi-Jama by the foot of One reason why it is so difficult to please woman is, that she seldom knows herself chandise of the Ashland relics, is a traitor, what she wants.
